नये ad (न & येणे That will not come, i. e. be proper or advisable.) A particle mildly expressive of prohibition on account of impropriety or in-expediency. It follows the root of verbs prepared for it by the assumption of one of the affixes तां & कं.

It has a plural form (नयेत) agreeing with the object of the verb if transitive, and with the subject if intransitive. Ex. त्यानें हें काम करतां or करूं नये;

त्यानें हे आंबे खाऊं नयेत He should not do this work, eat these mangoes &c. त्या बायका एथें वरूं

नयेत. N. B. The plural form is often disregarded and the त omitted. And on the affixes तां & कं it may be observed here that they slightly differ;

the sentence constructed with the first, prohibiting the act specified rather on account of its disadvantageousness or unprofitableness; and the sentence constructed with the second, prohibiting it rather on the ground of impropriety or wrongness. And further, the root with the affix

तां admits indifferently of म्यां or मला, त्यां or तुला, त्यानें or त्याला &c.; whereas the root with the affix

कं suffers the agent only in the form म्यां, त्यां, त्यानें.

ने The particle marking the third or instrumental case of nouns. The plural is नीं. 2 It is used with the inflected third person singular of a verb transitive in the past tenses and of a verb in the आवा form of the infinitive mood. Used with the inflected third person plural it becomes नीं. 3 ind A particle noting removal, having the power of from. With adverbs of place having a final mātrā, it is conjoined after the elision of the mātrā, as एथने, तेथने, कोठने, इकडने, तिकडने ; with others it is conjoined simply, as आंतने, बाहेरने, अलाडने, पलाडने ; with names of places it is conjoined after their assumption of the case denoting unto or to, implying prior advent unto. Ex. पुण्यासने सातात्यासने (आलां, गेलां), not पुण्याने, सातात्याने, for here ने together with the स of the case assumed stands for पासून.

ने, whether as standing for पासून or for the classical particle वून or ऊन (to which it answers throughout), is considered as vulgar ; yet it is freely used by the educated.

Note. When marking the third case of nouns, and when accompanying the third person of verbs, the form should be ने & नीं (i. e. with the dot) : when bearing the power of From and representing पासून or वून the form is ने.

बलुतेदार or बलुता or त्या m (बलुतें &c.) A public servant of a village entitled to बलुतें. There are twelve distinct from the regular Government-officers पाटील, कुळकरणी &c.; viz. सुतार, लोहार, महार, मांग (These four constitute पहिलो or थोरली कास or वळ the first division. Of three of them each is entitled to चार पाचुंदे, twenty bundles of Holcus or the thrashed corn, and the महार to आठ पाचुंदे); कुंभार, चान्हार, परोट, न्हावी constitute दुसरी or मधली कास or वळ, and are entitled, each, to तीन पाचुंदे; भट, सुलाणा, गुरव, कोळी form तिसरी or धाकटी कास or वळ, and have, each, दोन पाचुंदे. Likewise there are twelve अलुते or supernumerary public claimants, viz. तेलो, तांबोळी, साली, माळी, जंगम, कळवांत, डव्या, ठाकर, घडशी, तराळ, सेनार, चौगुला. Of these the allowance of corn is not settled. The learner must be prepared to meet with other enumerations of the बलुतेदार (e. g. पाटील, कुळकरणी, चौधरी, पोतदार, देशपांचा, न्हावी, परोट, गुरव, सुतार, कुंभार, वेसकर, जोशी; also सुतार, लोहार, चान्हार, कुंभार as constituting the first-class and claiming the largest division of बलुतें; next न्हावी, परोट, कोळी, गुरव as constituting the middle class and claiming a subdivision of बलुतें; lastly, भट, सुलाणा, सेनार, मांग; and, in the Konkan, yet another list); and with other accounts of the assignments of corn; for this and many similar matters, originally determined diversely, have undergone the usual influence of time, place, and ignorance. Of the बलुतेदार in the Indápúr pergunnah the list and description stands thus:—First class, सुतार, लोहार, चान्हार, महार; Second, परोट, कुंभार, न्हावी, मांग; Third, सेनार, सुलाणा, गुरव, जोशी, कोळी, रामोशी; in all fourteen, but in no one village are the whole fourteen to be found or traced. In the Pandharpúr districts the order is:—पहिली or थोरली वळ (1st class); महार, सुतार, लोहार, चान्हार, दुसरी or मधली वळ (2nd class); परोट, कुंभार, न्हावी, मांग, तिसरी or धाकटी वळ (3rd class); कुळकरणी, जोशी, गुरव, पोतदार; twelve बलुते and of अलुते there are eighteen. According to Grant

Duff, the बलुतेदार are सुतार, लोहार, चान्हार, मांग, कुंभार, न्हावी, परोट, गुरव, जोशी, भाट, सुलाणा; and the अलुते are सेनार, जंगम, शिंपी, कोळी, तराळ or वेसकर, माळी, डव्यागोसावी, घडशी, रामोशी, तेलो, तांबोळी, गोंधळी. In many villages of Northern Dakhan the महार receives the बलुतें of the first, second, and third classes; and, consequently, besides the महार, there are but nine बलुतेदार. The following are the only अलुतेदार or नाहू now to be found;—सेनार, मांग, शिंपी, भट गोंधळी, कोर-गु, कोतवाल, तराळ, but of the अलुतेदार & बलुतेदार there is much confused intermixture, the अलुतेदार of one district being the बलुतेदार of another, and vice versa. (The word कास used above, in पहिली कास, मध्यम कास, तिसरी कास requires explanation. It means Udder; and, as the बलुतेदार are, in the phraseology of endearment or fondling, termed बासरे (calves), their allotments or divisions are figured by successive bodies of calves drawing at the कास or udder of the गांव under the figure of a गाय or cow.) ब्रह्म n (S) The divine substance or essence as well as cause of the universe. All existencies—the divine triad, gods and demigods, spirits, mankind, worlds and their animals and furniture—are the development or expansion of it, and are, after the consummation of periods, resumed into it; to be, after the lapse of periods of extinction or dormancy in Brahma, again projected into being apparently personal or individual, but actually mere emanation or figurate procession. These effluences, being from the really-subsisting Brahma, the substantive and undisputed entity, are real,—are not, as inexpert Vedántists represent them, ideal and illusory, the phantasmal conceptions of phantasmal thinkers, the deceptions of the darkness of dualism. This expansion then of Brahma (i. e. this universe) being real (real as the very substance of the spiritual and divine monad), the Máya or Illusion of Vedántism is to be understood as lying in the assumption by this expansion of the pretensions of a creation—in its presentation of itself, surely only to the poor being obedient to the inculcations of his senses, his understanding, his intuitions, and his nature, as subsisting distinctly, and as consisting of phenomena distinct and individual. This, even this, is the high doctrine of अद्वैत or the विराट्देह—Hindú and European Pantheism. 2 The four Vedas. 3 In comp. मदन n The corn arising from the first treading of the ears; the corn and chaff together: also called पहिलें मदन. Of the second treading the produce is called दुसरें मदन or आकणाचें मदन. Of the third treading तिसरें मदन or निकणाचें मदन. आकण is the name of the ears that have been trodden once: निकण, of the ears that have been trodden twice. Great pains have been taken to determine these words; and careful inquiries have been made respecting them of farmers from different parts of the country. The above may be relied on as the sense in some districts: in others, according to the proverb पहिली रास दुसरें आकण तिसरें निकण चैथा मणी त्यास बलुता घणी, रास is explained to be The heap of corn and chaff the produce of the first treading of the ears, आकण the produce of the second treading, निकण the produce of the third treading, and मणी the scanty and light grains which fall during the winnowing of निकण; and the word मदन either is unknown or is explained as equivalent with रास. These words, however, are but three amongst many hundreds which different districts, and, not unfrequently, different villages understand differently. Varying acceptance even of the commonest words is a fact so familiar to the Natives that it precludes their contesting applications and uses howsoever devious from their own; according to their hourly-uttered proverb बारा बारा कोशांवर भाषा फिरतो. The four following words are, in some parts, used to designate The trodden out mass and the states or forms into which it is separated through winnowing—रास, कांडें, मातेरें, फंजट or वरळें. The heap; the stalks and ears subjected to a second treading and winnowing; the mass of corn and dirt; the light grains and remaining chaff.
